The ICA Council on Chiropractic Pediatrics is a specialty council of the International Chiropractors Association, one of the oldest chiropractic associations in the world founded by Dr. B.J. Palmer. Based in Arlington, Virginia, in the United States, the Pediatrics Council was the first organization to realize the need for quality pediatric education and to present a Conference in 1991 focused entirely on pediatrics with a research segment. Since then the Council has grown and matured, but "excellence in education and practice" is still its primary focus. It offers the world's only 30-module, 360-hour, postgraduate pediatric program (Diplomate in Clinical Chiropractic Pediatrics) administered through an accredited chiropractic institution. Our members are only dedicated practitioners with years of experience caring for infants, kids and pregnant women. Because of their love and commitment to children, these "practitioner-instructors" are always willing to share their knowledge and expertise with others so more infants and children may experience the benefits of safe, effective and appropriate chiropractic care.
